"The people are not disposed to repudiate the debt. If they had been they would long ago have done so. They are aware of the justness with which it is due. They are aware of the immense resources of the State. They are looking confidently for an early de velopment and utilization of those resources. They expect to give assurance to the world that Virginia's bonds are on a basis of strength."

People of Virginia know their purpose to maintain the public honor, and the whole afraid he was drowned "a-a-a-a-fi-hing." world should know it. The people of Virginia know well "the immense resources of the State," as the Whig expresses it, and we believe that world of civilization and commerce with which we have intercourse has even a better appreciation of those "immense resources" than they have. About this there ought to be doubt neither at home nor abroad, and all ought to consider " that Virginia's bonds are on a basis of strength."

With this will and faith prevailing, there should be no issue at the polls on the subject. was note of preparation at one time for a crusade against the debt; for tearing up the whole question; for throwing the State at lic and private credit, in a state of incertitude, and filling the land with apprehension and suspending enterprise and repelling population and capital in a manner ruinous to all classes. We did say and do say that such a crusade as that should be met by all advocates of State solvency and State authorityof those who would preserve the State in its true character of a State with its proper such a crusade as that, we are for the Whig's platform: "No repudiation"and "give the world assurance that Virginia's bonds are on a basis of strength." Here rest awhile, and no harm can come to the State or ber creditors. Here rest with the early development and utilization of those" stated. immense resources we all feel so thankful and proud that Virginia possesses. As the Whig says:

"Let the solution for the present be for Virginia to economize as closely as circumstances will possibly permit, and, after allowing a frugal living for herself, pay to her creditors all she bas lett."

At the agminating convention on Friday night for naming officers for the town the present incumbents were nominated, which equivalent to election: Mayor, W. L. Cochran. Aldermen: R. F. Harris, B. Oberdoner, C. H. Harman, S. M. Keller, Dr. John Lewis, and Dr. R. W. Nelson.

In politics there is a growing feeling in favor of repudiation. I am astonished at the expressions of those whom I have looked upon as men to be relied on in any emergency where the hunor of the State is concerned. This question will be the issue in the next election for the Legislature, and 1 very much fear that they will beat us two

Among the great features of these Springs are the Amosements, which are varied, and far surpass those of any watering-place in Virginia. The Grand Masque Balls and Carnival in spien for and brilliancy surpass anything ever witnessed in this section of the country. In fact, nothing of the kind has ever been attempted by any other summer resort, and nothing but a desire to lead dould have induced the lumense outlay necessary to secure Moxley, the incomparable Washington costumer, with his regiment of assistants, cardiads of costumes, tons of fireworks, and thousands of Chica HYDRATE OF MAGNESIA AND WATER by an entirely new process. This is a perfect solution of magnesia and free from carbonic acid, and is consequently not injurious to the stomach. It is the best preparation for children, being prompt and entirely harmless. It is an agreeable aperient and amacid, removing headaches arising from with his regiment of assistants, car-leads of cos-tumes, tons of fireworks, and thousands of Chinese lanterns, and eccans of evergreens.

The Grand Carnival, which precedes the bal-masque one night, is led by Professor Rittenhouse's full brass band, followed by Major-General B in command of the Multigan Guards and his far-famed and thoroughly-trained el-phint Coloy; and command of the Mutilgan Guards and his far-famed and thoroughly trained el-print Coley; and General L. follows with a counterpart of P.
